

lozenge

...“an anarchic bastard child of avant-garde jazz geeks who’ve been listening to too much heavy metal. They layer and intertwine several horn sections, creating a dense contrapuntal sound backed by furious big drum beats.”

The Hamicks

described in MRR as, “A weird blend of Thee Headcoats, new wave, and that stuff they call horrorcore”

DragKing

an experimental pop band from Chicago described by Edwin Pouncey in Wire thusly, “what comic bandleader Spike Jones might have come up with if he had turned totally punk”
